Market Commentary

August 2026 was a month of records and second thoughts. U.S. equities spent the first three weeks climbing to new all-time highs before a hawkish turn from the Federal Reserve trimmed the advance, yet the major indices still closed the month firmly in positive territory. The S&P 500 finished August at 7,686.14, while the Nasdaq Composite ended at 26,370.89. Over the full month the S&P 500 advanced roughly +2.68%, a notable contrast to July's flat finish.

The month's early strength was built on inflation data. July's Consumer Price Index rose just 0.1% on the month and 3.4% over the year, with core CPI up 0.2% monthly and 2.5% annually, all four readings landing exactly in line with consensus. Combined with cooler producer-price data and falling oil, this drove the S&P 500 above 7,800 for the first time ever, to a closing record of 7,798.99 in mid-August. The tame prints, arriving after a soft July jobs report, took the urgency out of a near-term rate move and let the AI-and-semiconductor complex resume its leadership.

The single most powerful catalyst of the month came from Nvidia. The chipmaker jumped after beating expectations and forecasting revenue growth of roughly 70% in fiscal 2028 (far above the 44% analysts had penciled in), with its fiscal second-quarter revenue more than doubling. The report lifted the entire semiconductor complex, with Broadcom, SK Hynix and Intel all rallying, and delivered the best single day for the tech sector, the S&P 500 and the Nasdaq since early August.

The turning point, however, was Jackson Hole. In his first major address as Chairman, Kevin Warsh warned that while summer inflation readings were better than expected, they did not signal that underlying trends had meaningfully improved, and he hinted that rates could need to move higher absent further progress. Breaking with two decades of tradition, Warsh declined to signal the path of policy, insisting he was "committed to a discipline, not to a decision" and arguing that markets should not look primarily to the Fed for their next trade.

Markets read the message clearly: the probability of a September rate hike jumped to roughly 60% on the CME FedWatch tool, and equities gave back part of their gains into month-end.

Europe delivered a milder version of the same story. The STOXX 600 gained about 0.9% over August and the STOXX 50 roughly 2%, with both indices having set record highs earlier in the month. The resilience rested on an exceptionally strong earnings season, even as politics and rates weighed at the margin. On the policy side, the tone was firmly hawkish. Inflation data from France and Spain reinforced the case for further tightening, with EU-harmonized inflation rising to 2.7% in France and 4.5% in Spain, the latter its highest since 2023, and investors have largely locked in expectations of a September ECB rate increase. Europe, once again, offered a broad market underpinned by fundamentals rather than a single narrative.

Mexico was quietly constructive, with the story written more by the currency than by equities. The S&P/BMV IPC spent the month around the 66,000 level, closing late August near 65,430.32 after a choppy summer that left it roughly 9% to 10% below its 52-week high. The key anchor remained Banxico. The central bank voted unanimously on August 6 to hold its benchmark rate at 6.50%, its second consecutive pause, judging that inflation would not return to the 3% target until late 2027, making a cut premature. In its quarterly report the bank raised its 2026 growth forecast to 1.5% from 1.1%, citing a stronger-than-expected second quarter, while stressing that future rate moves have no preset path.

Asia saw China extend the recovery it had built through the summer. The Shanghai Composite closed the month near 3,985 points, having gained roughly 4.8% over the prior four weeks to reach its highest level since July, flirting repeatedly with the psychologically important 4,000 mark. Policy remained the tailwind. The People's Bank of China held its benchmark lending rates at record lows while pledging to maintain an accommodative stance, with expectations of further stimulus reinforced by soft July data and Premier Li Qiang's call to accelerate the shift toward new growth drivers. Investors spent the late-August sessions awaiting the National People's Congress Standing Committee meeting for further policy signals.

Foreign-exchange markets captured the month's crosscurrents with unusual clarity. Against the euro, the dollar softened: EUR/USD strengthened roughly 0.94% over August to around 1.16, as the prospect of ECB tightening and firm European inflation supported the single currency even after Warsh's hawkish turn lifted the greenback into month-end. The U.S. Dollar Index ended the month broadly flat near 99.5, caught between a Fed unwilling to signal cuts and slowing U.S. growth. Against the Mexican peso, the picture was decisively constructive: the peso strengthened through the 17.00 level for the first time this cycle and closed August near 16.98 per dollar, among the strongest emerging-market currencies of the year.

Taken as a whole, August 2026 was a month in which markets embraced the "higher for longer" reality without abandoning the AI-driven growth story that has powered the year. Record highs gave way to a more sober late-month tone as the Federal Reserve reminded investors that inflation, not growth, remains its primary concern. The macro backdrop into September is one of a still-resilient global economy, sticky inflation across the developed world, and central banks that have collectively shifted from a dovish to a cautious-to-hawkish bias.

It is against this backdrop, and mindful that September has historically been a difficult month for equities, that we enter the period with caution. Consistent with the disciplined posture we have maintained since May, we are keeping cash levels above 20% and hedging the portfolio through efficient strategies, favoring earnings quality, symmetry of risk and reward, and capital preservation. With the year's return already achieved, protecting those gains looks more prudent than reaching for more in what increasingly appears to be an extended market.

Performance overview

Given the rally experienced in U.S. markets, due mainly to the macroeconomic data mentioned above and strong quarterly earnings from most major companies, our U.S. Shares were able to ride the rally and close the month in positive territory, adding +1.94% to the fund's monthly performance.

Our algorithmic models delivered modest but consistent returns. These strategies now carry more diversified sector exposure, intended to protect the strong return achieved during the year; as a result, our algorithmic strategies added +0.07% to the fund's monthly performance.

Our U.K. Shares closed the month in positive territory, and although they represent only a small number of companies, they have demonstrated resilience to prevailing market conditions. During August, they added +0.05% to the fund's monthly return.

Finally, by keeping our cash position above 20%, we continue to generate steady returns from the carry earned on our liquidity. This cash level contributed +0.04% to the fund's monthly performance.

Our challenges

Given current market levels, we decided to hedge most of the portfolio through a sophisticated options strategy designed to defend our positions in the event of a strong market pullback. This kind of protection functions much like an insurance policy: it carries a cost, but that cost is defined and fully known in advance, and we always decide deliberately how much we are willing to pay for the coverage it provides. During August, the markets did not deliver the sharp decline the strategy was built to protect against, so the premium we committed was ultimately booked as a cost rather than a gain. As a result, our options strategy represented a drag of -0.43% on the fund's monthly performance.

Secondly, one of our private equity positions experienced a lag in its valuation. Because this position is valued in Mexican pesos while the underlying asset is quoted in U.S. dollars, the strength of the peso (or the weakness of the dollar) produced an FX drag on the position, leading to -0.21% on the fund's monthly performance.

Finally, some of our Asian Shares were unable to close the month in positive territory. As these are only a few names and experienced a modest pullback, the strategy ended August with -0.07% on the fund's monthly performance.

The information contained in this material is for illustration and discussion purposes only. It is not intended to be, nor should it be construed or used as, investment, tax, or legal advice, any recommendation or opinion regarding the suitability or appropriateness of any investment or strategy, or an offer to sell, or a solicitation of an offer to purchase, an interest in any security, including an interest in the private pool fund described herein (the "Fund") or any other fund or private pool advised by the Investment Manager or any of its affiliates. This information is fully qualified by the information contained in the Fund's offering documents, including the private placement memorandum or other prospectus (collectively, the "Offering Documents"). Any offer or solicitation of an investment in the Fund can only be made by delivery of the Fund's Offering Documents to qualified investors. Prospective investors should rely solely on the Offering Documents when making any investment decision. The Offering Documents contain important information, including, but not limited to, a description of the Fund's risks, investment program, fees, and expenses, and should be read carefully before making any investment decision. This material does not take into account the specific investment objectives, restrictions, or financial, legal, or tax situations of any particular investor. An investment in the Fund is not suitable for all investors. Past performance is not necessarily indicative of future results. This document is not intended for public use or distribution. Unless otherwise noted, the performance shown is audited, net of applicable management, performance, and other fees and expenses, assumes reinvestment of profits, and excludes specific investor sales and other charges. Please refer to the Fund's offering documents for more information on the Fund's fees, charges, and expenses, which will reduce the Fund's profits. Performance may vary significantly from year to year, or even month to month. Actual investor performance and fees may differ from the performance information shown due to, among other factors, capital contributions and withdrawals/redemptions, different share classes, and eligibility criteria for participation in "new issues." The value of investments may go up or down. Certain share classes of the fund may be closed, including the share class from which the performance shown has been derived. Past performance is not indicative of future results.

Benchmarks and financial indices are shown for illustrative purposes only and are provided to make general market data available as a single reference point. The information related to indices and benchmarks has been provided by and/or is based on third-party sources and, although believed to be reliable, has not been independently verified. Such benchmarks and financial indices may be available for direct investment, may be unmanaged, assume the reinvestment of income, do not reflect the impact of fees and trading costs, management or performance fees, and have limitations when used for comparison or other purposes because, among other reasons, they may have different trading strategies, volatility, credit, or other material characteristics (such as limitations in the number and types of securities or instruments). The Fund's objective is not limited to the securities and instruments that comprise any index. No representation is made that any benchmark or index is an appropriate measure of comparison.

Performance targets or objectives should not be taken as an indication of actual or projected future results. Actual volatility and returns will depend on a variety of factors, including general market conditions and the Investment Manager's ability to implement the Fund's investment process, objectives, and risk management. No representation is made that these targets or objectives will be achieved, in whole or in part, by the Fund.

Fund Risk Disclosures: Hedge funds are unregistered private investment pools that may invest and trade in various markets, strategies, and instruments (including securities, non-securities, and derivatives) and are not subject to the same regulatory requirements as mutual funds, including mutual fund requirements to provide certain periodic and standardized pricing and valuation information to investors. There are substantial risks in investing in hedge funds. You should carefully consider the following: Hedge funds represent speculative investments and involve a high degree of risk. An investor could lose all or a substantial part of their investment. Investors must have the financial ability, sophistication/experience, and willingness to bear the risks of an investment in a hedge fund. An investment in a hedge fund should be discretionary capital reserved strictly for speculative purposes. An investment in a hedge fund is not suitable or advisable for all investors. Only eligible qualified investors may invest in hedge funds. Hedge fund offering documents are not reviewed or approved by federal or state regulators. Hedge funds may be leveraged (including a high degree of leverage), and hedge fund performance can be volatile. An investment in a hedge fund may not be liquid, and there may be significant restrictions on the transfer of interests in a hedge fund. There is no secondary market for a hedge fund investment, nor is one expected to develop. A hedge fund may use a single advisor or employ a single strategy, which could result in a lack of diversification and higher risk. A hedge fund may involve complex tax structures, which should be read carefully, and may involve structures or strategies that may cause delays in important tax information being sent to investors. Hedge fund fees and expenses, which may be substantial, will offset the hedge fund's trading profits, regardless of any positive returns. Hedge funds are not required to provide periodic pricing or valuation information to investors. Hedge funds and their managers/advisors may be subject to various conflicts of interest. The foregoing summary is not a complete list of the risks and other important disclosures involved in investing in hedge funds and is subject to more complete disclosures contained in a hedge fund's confidential offering documents, which must be reviewed carefully. Directors and employees of Cretum Capital may make personal investments in certain hedge fund products for which Cretum Capital is compensated for introducing potential investors. Any personal investment by a director or employee of Cretum Capital in any hedge fund does not constitute a recommendation or endorsement of any specific product.
